Machine foundations overview

Vibration isolation of foundations
Foundations are for making a machine rigid or for gathering several machine components onto a common load-bearing ground. Only by using vibration isolation and the resulting decoupling from the building ground can the area be reliably protected against disturbing vibrations.

KombiRoc
AirLoc uses specifically designed KombiRoc pads for filling the remaining space between the isolation pads.